

Mail Plane

Value: £2.00
Platform: N64
Version: Western
Original release: 1996

Virtual Bowling

Value: £600-800
Platform: Nintendo Virtual Boy
Version: Japanese
Original release: 20/12/1995

Virtual Bowling

Value: £600-800
Platform: Nintendo Virtual Boy
Version: Japanese
Original release: 20/12/1995
Developer/publisher: Athena/Nintendo

Athena's only game for the Virtual Boy is exceptionally rare and highly sought after. Like Gundam Dimension Battle the game was made and sold in very small quantities and as the platform steadily increases in popularity, more and more collectors push the price up. Incidentally the price here would pale into significance should prototypes such as VB Waro Land and Mario Adventure, which were never released, appear on the market.

Scratch

Value: £10-£15
Platform: Sega Mega CD
Version: UK
Original release: 14/10/95
Developer/publisher: Renegade

Renegade's excellent prod of its Atari-style action to any English language release on the Mega CD. Scraper, extremely sought after especially in its UK guise, the first quest more than a sequel need to World Master. This is a Renegade/Kalishan collector's must-have, and alongside Lunar, the main reason to hold in the native hardware.

Dragon Ball GT: Final Bout

Value: £100-150
Platform: Nintendo 64
Version: UK
Original release: 1995
Developer/publisher: Banami

Incidentally the fourth game continues to remain in the market and consistently commands very high prices. A sealed copy sold for $400 recently. Limited to 10,000 copies the game is a cult classic due to the entire team of Japanese pop culture. Besides that, very poor games will sell well above their gameplay's worth if the conditions are right. The Japanese version is worth a fraction of this version.
