games at times and am disappointed because what is in my mind are your graphics and drawings instead of the actual game graphics! Keep up the good work.

In the Zone

I think that the new Arena is AWESOME!! The Battle Zone is really cool. It shows how many Nintendo Power members entered the challenge. The scores are now on Nintendo Power Source on America Online! I congratulate you on your success. Keep it up.

Oh Where, Oh Where, Have My Power Charts Gone?

Overall, I like the changes in Nintendo Power. The expanded Player's Pulse and the new Arena really got my attention. But there are a few minor flaws. First, cutting the Power Charts from two pages to one! That was one of my favorite sections! Second, I had a really hard time locating the Classified Information section because you changed the manila border that has been its trademark for the previous 79 volumes! Very big no-no.

Player's Poll Winner

Climbs into the Treehouse

Excuse Daniel Staskevicius if he's copped a "Been there, done that" attitude of late. The Volume 76 Grand Prize Winner jetted into Seattle and caught a nail-biting Sonics/Spurs classic that very night before dining in style atop the world-famous Space Needle. But the high points of his trip took place inside the four walls of NOA. Daniel picked up a stack of Virtual Boy games and played pre-release copies of Bound High and Dragon Hopper. Even better was a trip to the legendary Treehouse, where master game-player Henry Sterchi gave Daniel an exclusive preview of the Nintendo 64. Daniel then got a wish fulfilled when he squared off against Henry in KI 2. Daniel kept his cool and even got to pull a few finishing moves on the master. Now that's awesome!

Binding Finding

I have been an avid Nintendo Power subscriber for many years, and never have I seen such a perfectly constructed magazine like the January Bonus Issue! I think the new binding is a significant improvement over the old square one, and I hope you decide to keep it throughout the years. Now whenever I open the magazine, it stays open. Although I find your magazine and your Web site very informative, I find them to be too centered around a younger audience. I think you should expand them from the pre-teen age to young adults and over. A larger vocabulary would definitely be the answer here. More in-depth talks about hardware and software would suit me fine.

WINTER GOLD

This fall may be a good time to take a European vacation. Our reasoning is that an awesome skiing game for the Super NES called Winter Gold will hit the slopes then. We first caught wind of the game last year when it arrived at NOA for approval. Excellent polygonal graphics combine with cheek-chilling speed to give the game a sense of realism. The game includes downhill, free style, ski jump, snow boarding, bobsled and luge events. The Norwegian developer, Funcom, used the FX chip to power Winter Gold.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL '97

Another EA Sports hit will find a home on the Super NES this fall thanks to a deal between EA and Black Pearl. College Football '97 features top collegiate grid iron teams from across the nation. The football engine from EA is one of the best around. In addition to College Football '97, expect to see NHL '97 and PGA European Tour for the Super NES. Black Pearl also has scheduled Urban Strike for Super Game Boy to be released later this summer. A slower than expected development cycle on Urban Strike has delayed the release of that game.

TITUS THE FOX RETURNS... WITH FRIENDS

This summer, Titus plans to stock stores with a number of Game Boy titles that it has released over the past four or five years. Leading the newly packaged lineup is Titus the

Fox, a friendly platform game starring Titus's namesake character. Other Game Boy titles include Lamborghini American Challenge, Blues Bros. Jukebox, Monster Max and Prehistorik Man. Titus and Lamborghini (a cool little racing game that includes an adventure element) should sell for only $19.99. In addition to the Game Boy titles, Titus will also bring back Lamborghini American Challenge for the Super NES for a special $29.99 suggested price.
